

Performance Challenges for the Pianist

Piano instructor Lynn Killingsworth will be presenting a brief lecture on controlling nervous energy in piano performance situations. She will draw on personal experience, as well as share many ideas she has learned from others over the years. Lynn will address the tendency toward self-sabotage shared by so many inexperienced pianists. Also discussed will be the obstacles and challenges pianists are often up against in playing inferior pianos in less than optimal venues. We will open it up to general discussion directly after her comments. All will be encouraged to participate and contribute to the discussion.

Lynn's performing experience includes recitals at Phoenix College, Arizona State University, University of Maryland, American University in Washington, D.C., Berkeley, Sherman Clay in Phoenix and Portland, and numerous private venues, including parties and other social events. Her main focus for over a decade has been guiding the pianistic development of students of all ages, along with writing piano jazz arrangements that she will be recording in the near future. Lynn's strong background in the world of ballet performance lends itself well to her deep understanding and interpretive skills of classical piano literature. She is available for piano instruction by calling (949) 419-5090 or by email at classicaljazz49@gmail.com.

Sunday, August 11, 2013
1:30-2:45 pm
SoCal Pianos
307 E Carmel St, San Marcos, CA 92078

AmateurPianistsSM